The Charter Election. The time is approaching when the Whigs must determine what course they will pursue in the selection of the members of our City government for another year. It is to be decided whether we shall adhere to our own organization, or relin. quish it and adopt some other, with different objects, different principles, different associates, and a different name. For the truth is, that the exchange of the Whig for the American Republican party involves all this. We have been told that the object of the latter is independent, and does not interfere with the great questions on which the people have been divided, every one being free to act respecting there as he may think proper. This is plausible and has satisfied many and secured their support, but it is deceptive -The man who acts with the American Republican party is expected by his associates to abandon the only effectual means by which the principles he has always professed, and the friends with whom he has always labored, can be at all supported. While he is said to be free in such matters, the moment he asserts that freedom he is interrogated, denounced and excommunicated. The mistake lies in supposing that such an assurance can be safely given. It cannot be given and conformed to, without leaving the American Republican organization a shadow; and resulting as it does, it cannot (if the Whigs agree) but make the Whig organization a shadow, such as it was in this City last Spring.

This question comes home to every Whig, whether he publicly takes part in political matters or not. It is a mistake to suppose that the mass who do not appear publicy in this manner may therefore readily separate from the rest .-The Convention and Committee men give direction to public affairs. They present the candidates for popular support and mark out the principles by which they shall be governed, and the community at large are responsible, according to the choice they make, for the conduct these men pursue. Public men are expected to be consistent and honorable. They ought to be; and dis honesty in politics should expose the guilty to shame, like dishonesty in any thing else.

But the representative has a night to expect in his constituents the same integrity which is re quired in himself, and the fact of being in private life is no excuse for pursuing a line of conduct which in a more public sphere would be disingenuous and unfair. If there is to be a separation between Whig Committee men and Whigs at large, let us know it, that the labor and expense incident to such an organization may be eaved.

We are asked to assume the name of 'Ameri can Republican' and to abandon that of ' Whig, and to subscribe to a declaration that the party to which we have belonged is corrupt and ought to be destroyed. Are we all ready to do this? And if we all go over with some of our late opponents, to another platform, with a new name, will that make us more honest and wise? But all may not go; and are the corrupt members of a party, whose principles and conduct might give occasion for reproach-are they the ones to adhere longest to a name and an association that has lost its power and inflaence? They are the very men advantage is to be gained. Is it expected that the 'Democra's' who join us will so entirely change our character as to make us pure and patriotic American Republicans, when as Whige, without them, we were corrupt and selfish?

Can we depend upon the fidelity of the men who come out to meet us and join in the new orcanization! This party began in Tammany Hall. A disciple of that school, an ex-Alderman, was one of its founders, and was the first Chairman of its General Committee. As soon as the party grew into life he abandoned it. At the election last November he brought up to the polls more newly naturalized voters than any other American born citizen who lived in the district; they could searcely speak the language plain the American Republican indignation and zeal that were displayed in those early addresses to which that man's name was signed? The same name is to be found among the delegates appointed for the current year to the Committees of Tammany Hall, along with some of the very foreigners whom he so lately denounced. There are other examples of the same kind. Now these do not prove that all the American Republicans from Tammany Hall are deceivers, but only show that we may be deceived by them. They loudly termach their late friends, and profess a strong desire to associate with us for a reform in public effeirs, and yet it is remarkable that they require as a condition precedent, the extinction of our party and the obliteration of our name. If after having concented to such hard terms and the annihilation of the Whig party has become complete, we should find our late associates leaving us again, our pain would be hightened by the consciousness that the result was to have been expeeted from the ordinary means of wariare which our adversaries had employed against us.

Let me acknowledge that from a deep conviction of its importance I have long cherished the principle of the American Republican party in respect to foreign influence, and on this account and for some other reasons I voted with many others last fall for their candidates, and for some of them in the spring. We gave them a generous support, and some of our friends, accepting the invitations given to them, subscribed the articles of the Association. Since then, these friends have been lost to us. We have seen them among us no more. They were lately bold and efficient in our cause, but now they are strangely Whigs.-Then it is evident that the American Republicans could easily have given us a truly

Correspondence of The Tribuna RALEIGH, N. C. Dec. 26, 1844 I cannot forbear writing you a short epist'e through which I have passed to reach this city. Many, if not most of your readers are acquainted with the route so far as Washington, and from tickets $1; myself, and three other persons only Southern traveler, or gentleman traveling South and he can get it there for six doilers with the privilege of stopping at Washington, Fredericksburg. lege of stopping at Washington, Fredericksburg; and and so on if he should prefer that route to going willage or hamlet for 150 miles. Raleigh is in notappear to be troubled with broachitis. It may by water, and if he is wise he will. When he gets to Washington the fear of opposition is past, perhaps 3,000 population black and white. The of coland he must submit to all the terrors of monopoly. For instance, he will be charged $2.50 from Baltimore to Washington, $3.25 without break fast or §3.75 with, from Washington to Freder icksburg by steamboat, a poor one at that; and then he must pay five dollars from Fredericks. burg to Richmond by the cars-miscreble enough and a quarter. If he should be going farther, great favorites sometimes. North Carolina is say to Charleston, he can save still more. Traveling on a Vaginia Railroad is a different thing from stepping on board the pleasant cars at I know not; for one I do not relish it very much-Brooklyn and scudding away smoothly and easily road, 70 miles in length, from Fredericksburg to Richmond lies through a woody and most unpromising section of country, making one sigh the New-England routes. But your traveler, not look with his own eyes, and wherever a conditions, as warm and dry feet and comfortable after visiting Mt. Vernon, fourteen miles from second pair are used there will be a lack of clothing, being regarded. Calisthenic exercises. after visiting Mt. Vernon, fourteen miles from Washington, which he will of course do, must not fail to go by way of Fredericksburg and there stop sufficiently long to visit the old dence and the tomb of Washington's winer! There is a portion of a monument over her dust, unfinished, yet an honorable token of the grat tude of one who only failed to complete it be cause his fortune had flown. The gentleman's ing about $10,000 he was obliged to leave its completion to time—and her stormy fingers have already marked it for ruin. Virginia scems to lack sufficient shame or money to lift the rough cone to its base!

At Fredericksburg, I had an opportunity of noticing some of the Virginia peculiarities. The true Virginian always leaves the door open as he passes in or out-he crosses streets at an angle no marter how many cross walks there may be and in horse back-ricing, which is very much i vogue, he sits astride the rear part of the saddle. sticking his legs forward in imitation of the man riding a comet in Elton's Comic Almanac! No matter where you see the traveling Virginian, he always has his faithful knopsack in his hand or on his horse's back—perhaps the more consistent name would be saddle-bags, so they are called.

You will meet with many annivances before you reach Richmond, and will regret more than once the absence of a thousand conveniences that attend Northern and Eastern travel-but when you get to Richmond, you can drive up to the Exchange Hotel kept by Boyden, formerly of the American in Broadway, a sisted by Major Stevens, whom let me most particularly recomand a capital reading-room you will forget the desolation through which you have passed. Richmond has a population of about 20,600, white and colored. To all appearance there are five colored to one white person, at least in the streets, and they look fat and sleek, shining as solicited business in his profession from Mr though they had been greated with whale ince I arrived thus far Se two weeks past, the weather has been like May or June except a slight fall of snow, and th negroes fairly swarm about the corners of the streets, some discussing "de matters of special importance," but more carrying huge loads of this or that on the tops of their head, balancing their burdens with the utmost dexterity and case. I saw no less than four climbing one ladder, each having as many as 100 pounds of brick or mortar on a square bit of board on his head, and the trial, he recovers from Mr. Fox $231 19, thus they toiled up firty or fifty feet, as it looked and of course the costs of this second action in to me in imminent danger of dropping their hods

Richmond is a queer looking city, very much like a good pices of cloth freited out at the edges. There is not the appearance of much bu-iness, not so much as is do e at Petersburg, a considerably smaller place, 22 miles farther South. The same habit of riding and street-crossing, you will though to answer any questions, and such as notice in Richmond as elsewhere. At present most needed it, had his assistance. To the Editor of the Tribune:

I wish to call public attention to the report of triel (which appeared in your paper of the 1st) between Nelson Merrill, a young lawyer, and Robert R. Fex, a respectable merchant of this city. It appears from the report that Merrill $69, and charge nothing for his services i unsuccessful. The suit progressed, and finally Fox was beaten and compelled to pay the claim of $69, and $294 more in cost to the plaintiff's lawyer. Merrill now turns round upon his patron, Mr. Fox, (as it appears from the report of the trial) and sues him for his costs, and as the agreement between them could not be proved on

Mr. Fox, whom I do not even know by sight, deserves the thanks of the merchants for exposing a system of fraud daily practiced upon the community by a clan who are a disgrace to an honorable profession. I will give one case as as example which will illustrate many.

A young lawyer applies to a merchant who had been unfortunate in business, and offers to carry him through the bankrupt court cheaply. His papers are made out, filed, and the bank rupt (expecting no opposition) awaits the day of appearance. Meantime another of the clan goes to one of his creditors and intimates that concerts to crowded houses, but it strikes me something can be got out of him if he is opposed, that women in this latitude are much boider and offices to do the job for nothing provided he faced than at the North; this rather shocks your does not succeed.
